Upward Trend Now Under Way

Hon. E. N. Rhodes and Prominent Bankers Endorse Bennett's Figures

The Prime Minister's confident and encouraging statement introducing the new Dominion Loan has created a very positive and favourable reaction throughout the Country. Its clear cut expression of his conviction that recovery is under way, together with the evidence he cited, have stimulated a growing sense of optimism in business circles which is reflected in the subscriptions to the New Loan. There has also been widespread endorsement of his view that, although the road may be long and progress slow, the events of the past six months appear to demonstrate with increasing clarity that the downward trend has come to a definite stop and that the upward trend is in progress.

Some examples of the comment from prominent Canadians follow.

Honourable E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance: "As Canadians we must all share in the sense of encouragement that the Prime Minister has inspired by his statement regarding the improvement in business conditions throughout this country. It has called our attention to indications of recovery that have become increasingly definite with each succeeding month, and which have been so sustained and consistent that one can no longer doubt their significance."

Spirit of Confidence

Sir Thomas White, Vice President Canadian Bank of Commerce: "I fully concur with the statement of the Prime Minister as to the upturn which has taken place progressively in Canadian business during the past few months. In almost every branch of the Country's economic life there has been manifest a slow but steady advance from the low point of last April. Despite adverse crop conditions I found during my recent tour of the West, not only a spirit of confidence but quite noticeable signs of improvement."

Professor Gilbert Jackson, Director of the Courses in Commerce and Finance of the University of Toronto, and Economist of the Bank of Nova Scotia: "The very temperate statement made by the Prime Minister with reference to recent improvements in Canada is fully validated by the fact. Not only have the physical volume of business and production increased since February by 34 per cent, but an even more encouraging point is that the prices of basic commodities have risen approximately in the same ratio. This has been followed by marked increases in manufacturing activity. Even in construction there are signs of improvement. Most encouraging of all is the increased confidence of the public in the situation evidenced by their increased readiness to spend. The rate of turnover of bank deposits has increased very readily since the spring."

Feed and Stock Exchange Plan Gets Approval

Drought Area Farmers May Secure Feed in Exchange For Livestock

(From Hanna Herald)

Announcement was made by Hon. Geo. Hoidley, provincial Minister of Agriculture, this afternoon, of a plan through which it is expected that the feed problem of stock men in the dried out areas may be relieved to a great extent. The plan provides for an exchange of stock in the drought area for feed grown by farmers in the more favored crop districts of the province. The exchange system should work advantageously to both parties, and will permit southern farmers to winter their own stock at home, rather than ship to northern feeding grounds, with possible danger of heavy losses next spring.

Department officials will bring together farmers of the Dry Area with those of northern districts having surplus feed. On a equitable basis of values, stock may be exchanged for feed, with the advantage of free freight in both directions. Northern farmers will thus be enabled to secure live stock without the necessity of paying real cash at the Edmonton stock yards and at a considerable saving as a result of the free freight concession. The southern stock owner will, in turn, be in a position to feed and care for his stock right at home, avoiding possible heavy losses as a result of shipping to inexperienced and, more or less, disinterested northern feeders.

Farmers desiring feed on this basis, should get in touch with their District Agriculturist, or any field representative of the provincial Department of Agriculture.

Royal Bank of Canada: "The Prime Minister has quoted statistics to show that there are definite signs of trade recovery in Canada, but, in my opinion, these statistics do not fully reflect the improvement which has occurred. While there are still a number of clouds on the business horizon, notably the low price of wheat and the partial crop failure, business throughout Canada has shown a definite and in a number of industries, a marked improvement, and my confidence in a continued upward trend is strengthened by the background of what seems to be a definite world wide recovery. It would be foolish to minimize the seriousness and extent of the problems still facing us, but the evidence of improvement will enable us to tackle these with greater heart and spirit. We are now offered an opportunity to show our confidence in ourselves and Canada in supporting the Government in its essential financial operations. Dominion of Canada Bonds are the premier securities available to investors."

Political Schools

Hon. Vincent Massey, president of the Liberal Federation of Canada, started something when he adopted an idea which has been in operation in Great Britain for a number of years and inaugurated the Liberal Summer Conference held at Port Hope, Ontario, in September. Ontario Conservatives quickly grasped the same idea and followed with a Conservative Summer School at Newmarket. Neither of these gatherings were of a partisan character, nor were they held under the authority of the official party organizations. They were round table conferences for the study and frank discussion of political, economic and social problems. No decisions were formally recorded, nor were resolutions adopted.

Inasmuch as the Liberal Conference was a Dominion-wide gathering, while the Conservative School was an Ontario gathering, and further as the Liberal Conference had been promoted some considerable time in advance of its meeting, Mr. Massey was successful in securing the attendance not only of leaders in the political and economic life of Canada, but men of standing and influence in Great Britain and the United States, including Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the British Liberal party, and Mr. Moley, the chief of the Roosevelt "brain trust." The Liberal Conference, therefore may be regarded as an indication of the character of these gatherings.

That conference was attended by many Conservatives and by supporters of the C.C.F., as well as by Liberals. Conservative views and Socialist views were just as freely expressed as Liberal views. As a matter of fact, the Liberal Conference and the Conservative School exchanged speakers, while most of Socialist views and leanings addressed both Conference and School. In a word, it was a coming together of men and women keenly interested in the current problems of the day as they affect Canada and the world of which Canada constitutes a part. They came together to study these problems, to obtain expert opinion in regard thereto, to examine and criticize suggested remedies and policies, and to frankly and freely exchange views thereon.

It was a school of citizenship in the highest and truest sense designed to engage some of the best thought of the country in a searching analysis of existing conditions and of suggested remedies designed to overcome the weaknesses and evils existing in our economic life and social order, and the part which governments must take in removing such evils and promoting the continued onward march of civilization and a progressive betterment in our whole standard of life and living.

So successful indeed did these gatherings prove to be, that nothing but praise has been voted by the press of Canada regardless of political affiliations. These conferences or schools are to be continued next year, and the probability is that such gatherings will be organized to be held in different sections of the Dominion in order that an opportunity may be afforded to a much larger number of earnest citizens to attend and participate in them.

Equally important—perhaps even more important—is another development arising out of these initial gatherings, and that is the formation in many centres across Canada of Discussion Clubs in which men and women deeply interested in public questions and matters affecting the public welfare are meeting and giving earnest heed and study to such matters.

Nothing but good can result from this study carried on quite apart from the partisan controversies and excitement of election campaigns. Speakers before such Discussion Clubs know that every word they utter will be fully weighed; that the facts they submit will be open to investigation; that the suggestions they advance will be minutely examined to determine their soundness, practicability and worth. Special pleading will be at a discount; emotionalism will not convince, but in the freedom of round table discussion, and in what might be termed the clash of intellects and authoritative opinion, knowledge will be advanced.

The inevitable result of such Schools and Discussion Clubs must be to raise the tone of public discussion in Canada. Political platforms of the future will have to be something more than mere vote-catching devices; if they are not they will fail to impress and attract the voters. Members of Parliament and of the Legislatures will find it increasingly necessary to keep themselves well informed, fair and convincing in debate, rather than merely concerned in gaining some party advantage. There will be a more general recognition of the fact that politics, after all, is not something ignoble and to be shunned, but rather that politics is, in fact and reality, the science of government.

It is to be hoped that this movement for a better educated, more enlightened citizenship will spread far and wide throughout Canada; that it will be encouraged and promoted by all political parties and groups, and that people of every variety and shade of political and economic thought will gather together in earnest study and frank but friendly discussion of what, in the final analysis, are the common concern of all, in which the interests of all are inextricably bound together.

Promises Not Kept

Sir Percy Lake Makes Plea For Better Treatment Of Veterans

Promises of governments to soldiers they would not suffer when they returned to their homes had hardly been fulfilled was the feeling among veterans, according to General Sir Percy Lake, of Victoria, en route home after attending the British Empire Service League conference in London.

Referring to placing jobless ex-servicemen in relief camps, Sir Percy said Saturday he thought these men should receive preferential treatment. The veterans should have a chance to make a little money so when they are out of work they would not be destitute on the streets, he added.

Secure Much Data

Scientists Return From Long Sojourn In The North

"Aurora borealis flashing directly overhead at Fort Rae never came lower than the earth's surface than 55 miles distance, during their observations," Dr. J. M. Stagg, leader of the party of British scientists who have spent the last 13 months at Fort Rae, North West Territories, studying northern weather conditions, made this statement.

Dr. Stagg flew from McMurray after coming out by river boat to superintend the transportation of some six tons of valuable instruments used by the scientists in their investigations. Five other members of the party came out some time ago.

Until the large volume of data gathered during the 13-month stay in the north had been studied it was impossible to state the result of their observations, Dr. Stagg said. Some 18 months would be required before the data could be placed in publishable form.

AFTER ACCIDENTS SHE PUT ON WEIGHT

Kruschen Took It Off Again!

A woman sends the following account of the consequences of an accident in which she was involved:

"A few days ago I had an automobile accident which left me more or less a cripple. Having to lie in bed so long, and being unable to move, I began to put on flesh. When I found I was 144 lbs., and being just under 5 feet you may guess how I was placed! So I thought I would try Kruschen Salts, and as once I saw they had done a great deal of good to others, I took it, but chiefly in keeping my weight down. In three months I lost 6 lbs. Then I left off taking the Kruschen Salts, and again went up to 142 lbs. Again, so as once I saw they had done a great deal of good to others, I took it, but chiefly in keeping my weight down. My weight last month was 134 lbs.—(Mrs.) W.H.M."

Germans Limit Sunday Meal

Simple Dinner Will Leave Extra Cost For Relief

A well-educated German public has limited its Sunday dinner to one "hot pot" without trimmings, soup, dessert and coffee, saving more than 50 pence (about 17 cents).

The gastronomic restrictions were in accordance with a government injunction putting each German on his honor to limit his eating and turn over the balance of what the usual Sunday dinner would have cost to the winter relief fund.

Boys And Girls On Montreal Playgrounds Mingle Agreeably

French, Polish, Ukrainian, Lithuanian and Russian children mix freely and gaily at the Hochelaga playground in Montreal, and whatever race prejudices there may be between the older generation finds no echo among these boys and girls, reports a woman supervisor.

"The team work among so many nationalities is something worth noting," she writes. "The spirit improves as the season progresses. The playground is truly appreciated in our district, as voiced by the children themselves. The parents are grateful too, but the differences of languages make it difficult for them to express their recognition. Actions, however, speak louder than words, and the fact the teacher is sent flowers, or vegetables from the garden, or Polish bread and viands of different variety bespeaks thanks."

Malnourished Dog and Black Bear In Alaska Are Good Pals

A part wolf malnourished dog fraternizing with a yearling black bear, and a horse herding with a cow moos and calf are peculiar anomalies reported from Kenai Lake, in the heart of the big Alaskan game country.

The dog was observed absenting herself from her owner's cabin at night. While wandering along a sand bar in a nearby creek, the owner observed the dog dash away to a small thicket. Investigation disclosed the bear cub and dog in a romp of camaraderie.

Recently the horse was observed accompanying a cow moos and her young calf and led them to his salt lick near his owner's corral.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROSE WEBSTER

Author of "Joretta" "Lipstick Girl" Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful, falls in love with Peter Anson, fellow student in an art school. She is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family, and he is a poor, struggling sculptor. On their first date, Peter spends most of his money to show Camilla a good time, and then decides he must give her up because he cannot stand the financial pace. A chance meeting with a man takes the way for another date. This time they walk in the park. Camilla tells Peter that she is not rich; or, at least, will not inherit the Hoyt fortune. Peter in turn confesses he is practically penniless. They fall into each other's arms. Together, in the park, Peter and Camilla try to arrive at some plan for the future. Mrs. Hoyt, Camilla's foster mother, objects to Camilla's secret and that a romance is brewing. She is anxious to see Camilla wed wealth. Mrs. Hoyt immediately begins to question the girl about her interest. Peter is shocked by her secret, and her private affair, anyway. So he ignored Camilla's ridicule and dire prophecies, and avoided further references to Camilla as much as possible. The two had met sufficiently in the routine of classes, and Camilla had been affable in his attention. And this was the way he was being repaid for his charity.

NEIGHBORS TALK

Now Go On With The Story

CHAPTER XIII.

When Peter first had admitted to Gus that he was serious about Camilla Hoyt, the latter had ridiculed his friend with jeering scorn. "Sure, if you want to land in the gutter just go ahead and fall for all the swell dames that cherish your handsome mug. Be a gigolo. Let some neophytes pay your tailor and your barbers and your hotel bills and lead you around by a gold leash and collar. Go on, you're built just for that. Let us men who are not so good to look at, in the work of the world and take the honors."

"That'll do for you," Peter warned, half angry. "Whether or not I love Camilla and whether or not she has money, will not affect my work in the least."

"Oh, no? Well, I've seen that work-out. And it's a wash-out, always. Forget the love-slush, kid, and be a man."

"When you find love, you are a man," Peter said soberly. "If you weren't one before, you have to be then."

"Say, what kinda true confession magazines have you been readin'? I thought I was watchin' your habits better than that!" he jeered.

To escape such terrors without an exhibition of anger, Peter had decided that if Gus knew Camilla, he would understand how serious he was about her. So he arranged for them to meet. The three had dined together one evening, in an obscure little restaurant on a side street where a bunting sign in the window had promised, "All You Can Eat for 60¢." Camilla had insisted upon going there when Peter suggested the dinner. He had demurred.

"Where?" she demanded, "would you and Gus have dinner, if you were alone? Tell me the truth."

He met her eyes with an amused gleam. "Well, the best kind of place to take Gus is one where they advertise a flat rate. He's a smaller man than I am but his capacity for food is on the down and down."

"That is where we shall go then—to a flat-rate restaurant. You find one—or I shan't go anywhere with you."

That was that, and settled the matter. The walls of the restaurant which they selected were of green tile decorated with a black frieze, instead of painted murals and tapestries. The music was of clattering nickel-silver on vitrolite tables and soprano voices of waitresses calling their orders to the cook.

"But what are you gonna do with her, kid? You can't afford a wife like that any more than you can own a Rolls-Royce or a yacht. The upkeep is about the same. Or do the car and the yacht go with her?"

"Not much. She goes with me."

"What?" Whither thou goest, I will go—than kind of hooey? Say kid," he pushed his hands away with a gesture of disdain. "That's what they all say until they get you. Then when they've slipped the collar and chain on, they make you do the following and take all the fancy steps they do, besides. Good-bye career, for you."

Peter did not enlighten Gus concerning Camilla's situation. That was her secret, and her private affair, anyway. So he ignored Camilla's ridicule and dire prophecies, and avoided further references to Camilla as much as possible. The two had met sufficiently in the routine of classes, and Camilla had been affable in his attention. And this was the way he was being repaid for his charity.

The second time he danced with her, he remarked in a confidential tone, "You're pretty keen about Peter, I guess."

"Everyone likes Peter," she agreed. "Sure, swell guy. But I mean seriously, Miss Hoyt, you and Peter have things settled pretty well, I believe."

"Did Peter tell you?" surprised.

"No, but I have two eyes, two ears and a brain that works every other impulse or so," he grinned indulgently.

Camilla laughed. "Well?"

He sobered. "I didn't ask you that just to be inquisitive. I had a reason, and a good one. I know some things about Peter that I think it's my duty to tell you. For his good and your own."

Camilla looked up anxiously, with a little puzzled frown. "I shouldn't want to know anything about Peter that he didn't tell me himself."

"Why not?" he demanded.

"Why—that wouldn't be fair to him, it seems to me."

"You're a queer one," he said. "That's when a woman can be the most help to a man, when she knows things about him he tries to keep from her. How about that first night when he took you out and almost broke the bank trying to blow you into thinkin' he was in your class?"

That was sufficient argument for Camilla. She never had overcome her chagrin over that episode. "Well, of course, anything like that," she admitted.

"Exactly what I mean," he declared.

"Why, if there is anything I can do to help Peter instead of hurting his chances, I'd like to know about it," she agreed.

"How about walkin' outside for the rest of this dance, while I tell you something, then, for your own good as well as his?" Gus invited.

Camilla consented readily.

They strolled toward the lilac hedge, which was no longer fragrant with panicles of bloom, but the night was sweet and warm with the promise of summer. "There are some benches around here, somewhere," he said. "We could sit down and rest while we talk."

Camilla knew well where the benches were, and located one easily. "Whew!" exclaimed Gus, "Society's not in my line. A little of that goes a long way with me. Of course," he amended in a lower voice, "it's different dancin' with a swell girl like you."

"Let's talk about Peter," she suggested quickly. "What do you think I should know about him, Mr. Matson?"

"So she doesn't want to hear about me, at all," he soliloquized. "I don't count. She wants to know about Peter. Aw right, aw right, baby, get a load of this." He announced abruptly in reply to her question, "That's a cheat and a double-crosser!"

Camilla gasped, astonished to silence for a moment. "Why, how dare you say that about Peter?" she finally demanded.

"I dare to tell you because I'm too crazy about you myself to see you fooled by a slicker like him!"

Camilla stood up angrily. "I'll not listen to another word you have to say."

"Wait a minute," Gus pleaded in a kinder tone, "you'll be sorry as long as you live if you don't listen to me."

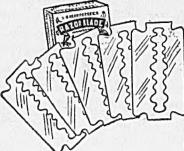

She hesitated. "Whether I listen to you or not, I shall not believe a word you say against Peter. So we'd better go back to the party."

"I'll take you back—when you've heard what I'm gonna say. Sit down, please Miss Hoyt." Her loyalty to Peter infuriated him, but he managed to appear calm and disinterested except in her welfare.

Camilla obeyed reluctantly, sitting rigidly on the edge of the bench, away from Gus and facing him, in an attitude of defense. She knew that Gus was not a gentleman. He was the kind of man whom no amount of culture could refine, no amount of training could develop even his talents. He scoffed at refinement and knew all there was to know, told the world, too, in his uncertain terms. She had tolerated him only for Peter's sake, who pitied him and believed that what he needed and deserved was a helping hand. Peter was so kind-hearted and guillible, and this was the way he was being repaid for his charity.

"Not much. She goes with me." "What?" Whither thou goest, I will go—than kind of hooey? Say kid," he pushed his hands away with a gesture of disdain. "That's what they all say until they get you. Then when they've slipped the collar and chain on, they make you do the following and take all the fancy steps they do, besides. Good-bye career, for you."

Chinese Have Advantage

Can Trace Ancestry Back Further Than Any Other People

A little cable dispatch from China the other day emphasizes, as few news items ever do, the incredible age of the civilization of that mysterious land. It recorded the fact that a lady in Peking can trace her ancestry directly back to old Confucius himself—and that she is his 77th lineal descendant. Since Confucius was born in 551 B.C., the family is now a little less than 2,500 years old; and in the face of a record like that—it isn't altogether uncommon, either, in China—the most pretentious of western genealogies must look utterly insignificant.

Diamond Dyes was born in 551 B.C., the family is now a little less than 2,500 years old; and in the face of a record like that—it isn't altogether uncommon, either, in China—the most pretentious of western genealogies must look utterly insignificant.

To a person who can trace his family tree that far back, our pride in our ancestry must look rather odd. And even the proudest members of European nobility, who claim descent from Crusaders and what-not, must be, in the eyes of cultured Chinese, mere upstarts.

If we are not fit to cope with that which he has prepared for us, we should have been utterly unfit for any condition we imagine for ourselves. In this time we are to live and wrestle, and no other. Let us humbly look at it, and we shall not wish that the sun could go back its ten degrees, or that we could go back with it. If easy times have departed it is that the difficult times may make us more in earnest; that they may teach us not to depend on ourselves. If easy belief is impossible, it is that we may learn what belief is, and in whom it is to be placed.—F. D. Maurice.

Accomplished Task Which Baffled New York's Best Clockmakers

A twenty-year-old girl accomplished a task which had baffled New York's best male clockmakers, and the Hotel Martiniere's famous 300-year-old clock again is ticking after being silent for a week.

The girl, Miss Louise Weyer, of Astoria, L.I., owner of the $30,000 clock stopping for the first time since it was placed in the hotel's lobby in 1911, and of the absence from the city of the clocksmith who regularly tends it.

She volunteered her services, donned a diamond and soon had the clock operating again.

A REMINDER!

A few years ago thousands of Alberta farmers petitioned and worked for the building of Alberta Pool Elevators. As a result the Pool system covers the Province in a close network.

The same reasons which inspired grain growers to ask for the service and protection of this co-operative system of elevators suggest that patronage should continue to be extended to them on a generous scale.
